Amidst the escalating challenges posed by climate change and increasing pressures on natural resources, water and energy stand out as paramount elements necessitating efficient management and sustainability. In this context, in a world facing mounting challenges from climate change and resource depletion, water and energy have emerged as critical areas demanding efficient management and sustainable practices. Recognizing this urgency, the Faculty of Applied Science at Kasdi Merbah University Ouargla, Algeria is proud to announce the first International Conference on Water, Energy, Environment and Materials Engineering (ICWEEME-2024) to be held from December 10 to 11, 2024.

This conference aims to assemble experts, researchers, and policymakers from around the globe to exchange ideas and knowledge and foster collaborative endeavors. The event will serve as a platform to spotlight modern innovations and cutting-edge technologies in these vital sectors, emphasizing sustainable applications that strike a balance between current needs and preserving resources for future generations.

The first ICWEEME-2024 conference committee is pleased to invite authors and scholars from all over the world to participate in this conference and share their innovative research progress with the academic and industrial world.
